Habits that work against the circadian rhythm are packed with hidden costs. The issue is these hidden costs seem like necessary expenses, even though the hidden costs are actually a long-term investment in inflammation. Want to find your hidden expenses?

intermittent fasting

1. Do a One Week Challenge

Once you decide which 8 hours will be your feed time and which 16 hours will be your fast time, stick to it for a week, it will seem a lot easier to stick to the schedule.

2. Pack Nutrients into smoothies and juices.

With IF you will eat less. You'll naturally become aware of nutrient density... and filler foods will become less appealing. Break your fast each morning with nutrient-rich fruits and juices made from veggies, fruits, avocado or almonds and water. Notice the life force in these living foods!

3. Eat 2, not 3, "real" meals a day.

About an hour after your juice or smoothie, enjoy a "real" breakfast: eggs and toast, oatmeal, chia seed porridge. About 5 hours later, eat "dinner," your main meal. This eating schedule opens up a lot of time in your day, allows you to digest your food more completely, and generates a stronger digestive fire, a deeper, more even flow of energy, and more mental clarity throughout your day.

4. Change WHEN before WHAT

Make it easier on yourself! Too much change at once will result in resistance and will send you back into old patterns that don't serve you. If you want to evolve what you're eating, do it after you're comfortable with your new eating schedule

5. Nourish your Body from the outside.

In the evening, practice self massage with quality, organic, cold pressed oils. For an even more decadent experience, add essential oils. Self massage aids in detoxification and transformation of fat tissue. You'll sleep better too!

6. Don't give up tea or coffee . . . yet

Similar to tip number 4, don't take on too many changes at once. Caffeine can aid in the transition to intermittent fasting by suppressing the appetite in the morning. Avoid adding calories in the form of cream or sugar.

7. Hydrate during fasting times.

Too much water during feeding times can dilute digestive fire. Drink plenty of warm or room temperature water during your fasting times. During feeding times, eat foods with plenty of water content.

8. Eat quality fats

Your body needs high quality fat. Breaking your fast with good clean fats and protein will keep you from overeating. Choose avocado, sesame tahini, coconut, and soaked almonds and cashews. Cook with ghee and high quality, organic, cold-pressed oils like olive oil and coconut milk. Find out what nuts or seeds are local to your ecosystem... and eat more of those. If you eat animals - choose organic and enjoy the fat that is part of the meat.

9. Use the buddy system

It's easier to evolve when you're not doing it alone. Recruit friends and family to try intermittent fasting (IF) with you. It's not exclusive to Ayurveda, so point potential partners in the direction of other communities that are employing IF. If you can't recruit your family, let them know about the changes you're making and ask for support.

10. Have fun!

Eating 2 meals a day frees up a lot of time, especially in the evening. Use that time to do things you love to do. Walk, read, swim, play with your kids, practice yoga, garden, meditate . . .

"Following self-imposed rules felt like a tough sell, even though my mind and body were not at their best. The spectacular revelation for me and my clients was the effect of freedom due to these habits.

We have more time to think, work, and play and are able to do it with so much more clarity, energy and stability as a result of sleeping well, eating well, and being totally engaged and present in our lives!..."

I think one of the major ways it's transformed me is through the body thrive part of the course where you change the way you eat and, and you develop these healthier habits.

So it's really been, that's just been really fantastic. It's just makes me feel great. It makes every day, just better."
